

Join the team!

The CSP represents you and your profession to your employer, your regulatory body and to the general public. To do this well the CSP relies on its established network of representatives to recruit and engage with members. To be most effective, we also need a wider team of active members locally. That's why we have developed the workplace contact role to help build that local team.

WORKPLACE CONTACT

A CSP workplace contact is an informal role for members, acting as a voice of the CSP in the workplace.

We are seeking workplace contacts to:

- Help organise member meetings and other workplace events
- Sharing info about CSP workplace activity and campaigns
- Help your steward map and recruit members in your workplace.

We want to build a local CSP team in every workplace. Although the role is voluntary and does not come with paid time off, any member can put themselves forward.

This is not a standalone role and forms part of the CSP team, alongside the CSP steward and safety rep.*

In organisations where there are currently no stewards, the workplace contact may be a standalone role until such time as a steward is elected. In this case, you will receive strong support led by the CSP organising team.*

STEWARD

*Becoming a CSP steward means that you become part of a national team that forms the trade union function of the CSP. We are seeking stewards to:

- Represent members with workplace problems
- Negotiate with management representing your members' views
- Recruit new members including support workers.

SAFETY REP

*Become a CSP safety rep and be a part of a national team of safety reps, who ensure a healthy and safe working environment for CSP members. We are seeking safety reps to:

- Carry out health & safety inspections
- Be an advocate for members at health and safety meetings
- Ensure managers consult with you, on behalf of members, regarding risk assessment findings, new technology and new equipment.

All safety reps and stewards receive national and regional training and are entitled to paid time off. Find out more at:
