FIGHTING FOR PHYSIO'S FUTURE

We all know physiotherapy has a positive impact on health and wellbeing, but workplaces and services are suffering from cuts and changing conditions.

So it's more vital than ever to get active and promote what physiotherapists do. The work of CSP students is crucial to help build the future of physio.

Will you join the journey from student2steward?

If you are passionate about making physiotherapy better, get involved with #student2steward, a network for CSP workplace stewards of the future.

CSP stewards constantly strive to advance physiotherapy at a local and national level, and improve working conditions for everyone in the profession.

Could you be a future CSP steward?

A steward's role includes recruitment, representing members and the profession, communicating with members, and campaigning.

A steward is part of a large community and network of support. Becoming a steward is a great way to learn about the profession and get to know the CSP.

So when you start working, consider taking on this vital role and becoming part of the team that forms the trade union function of the CSP.

Join the student2steward network

Stewards are elected by other CSP members in the workplace, so you can't be a steward until you start your first job – but you can start the journey.

If you join the student2steward network, you'll be one of the active students and new graduates across the UK who are committed to our profession, and we will keep you in the loop with key union activities.

Tweet your pledge to fight for physio's future, contact Cailean Gallagher, CSP Organiser, or speak to your student rep to join the student2steward network:
